Widow of Don Turbide Fled to Phila. After Husband Lost
Throne and Life

PAINTINGS AT MUSEUM

The Pennsylvania Museum has just received from Mexico two portraits, those of Don Augustin Turbide and his wife, Ana Maria. It is a long jump from turbulent Mexico to tranquil Philadelphia, but these two people were closely connected with the life of Philadelphia in 1825.

Nearly a hundred years ago Don Turbide was Emperor of Mexico for a few short months, and paid for the privilege with his life, which goes to prove that even in those far-off days, Mexico did not have a king. He was the King.

Turbide and General Juan O'Donoghue led a revolt in Mexico, planning to overthrow the authority of Spain, and as a result Turbide was chosen Emperor of a free and independent Mexico. After a whirlwind campaign, he was crowned emperor in Mexico City, and after a few days of peace, he was overthrown and fled to Philadelphia.

New Court Was Gaudy
Everybody was happy and satisfied. Turbide was a man of great energy, and he was crowned emperor in Mexico City, and after a few days of peace, he was overthrown and fled to Philadelphia.

But the call of Mexico was great and he came back to Mexico, and he was crowned emperor in Mexico City, and after a few days of peace, he was overthrown and fled to Philadelphia.

From Throne to Boarding House
Arriving here the royal family took up its residence in a quiet boarding house, run by one Mrs. Cagel, some what of a better class than the one in Mexico. One daughter attended school at the Georgetown Visitation Convent in Washington, and her mother, who was a widow, lived in the city.

The will was drawn up in 1825, and it is the Emperor's daughter, who was a widow, who lived in the city. The will was drawn up in 1825, and it is the Emperor's daughter, who was a widow, who lived in the city.

Her wardrobe, each dress specified, was given to servants—one maid, Catherine, who was a widow, who lived in the city. The will was drawn up in 1825, and it is the Emperor's daughter, who was a widow, who lived in the city.

Empress Died When Seventy-nine
After a long illness, the Empress Ana Maria died in March 1825 when the rainings of the Civil War were growing louder and louder. She died as she had lived, with war and the rumors of war.

And it is the pictures of these persons that have arrived in the Pennsylvania Museum—the main actors in the tragedy.

Don Augustin, self-made Emperor, gazes at one from narrow eyes, his teeth and pointed beard. He is clad in rich red velvet and the pearl encrusted crown upon his head bears the Mexican eagle and the cross. His soft lace-trimmed dress is a copy of the Mexican Constitution.

His house was in the Cathedral of Mexico City and every year his anniversary is celebrated as a holiday in Mexico, where he is now hailed as the "Father of his Country."

SAY WATER IS HEALTHY
City Officials Admit Ground for Complaint, but Assure Citizens
The offensive taste and odor in the drinking water furnished by the city in the West Philadelphia district, which is supplied from the Schuylkill, has caused many complaints to be lodged with the Department of Public Works in the last few days. It is admitted by the officials that the complaints are well founded, but they give assurance that the water is free from disease-bearing germs and at no time does it contain any matter or is in a condition to jeopardize health.

ENDS LIFE AFTER ROW
Man Quarrels With Sweetheart,
Shoots Self in Friend's Home
Worried over a quarrel with his sweetheart, Gene Yohannes, twenty-one years old, Lawrence street near Jefferson, shot and killed himself yesterday afternoon at the home of August Fane, Benner street, Larchmont, to whom he had gone for consolation, according to police.

Yohannes confided his troubles to his friend, who told him not to worry. A short time later Fane, who had let Yohannes alone in the parlor, heard a shot, and found Yohannes lying on a sofa with a bullet in his head. Yohannes was pronounced dead at the Frankford Hospital and the body was removed to the morgue.

FLASK-PADDED HIPS ARE DERNIER CRI IN WET CIRCLES

Jewelers Say 'Ma' and 'Pa' Buy More Than Do Flapper
Daughters or Young Sons of the Family

Padded hips for men.
This is not fashion's decree, but it is the style in vogue, and jewelers here in Philadelphia assert prohibition is responsible.

Now that the jewelers mind, because it has meant a sudden increase in demand for pocket flasks, flasks of all sizes and prices, but mainly for flasks that can fit snugly upon the moustache and not make too much of a bulge.

Soon after prohibition went on the statute books the demand for flasks jumped. Then came a slump, but now the demand has reached the "steady" stage.

It is not the young man about town or the debaucher who buys the expensive articles, "It is the father or mother, the mother who is responsible for the majority of the sales."

"Why has there been this great increase in the sale of these articles? Because it is hard to reach new habits, to alter the accustomed living conditions of a man in the middle age who has become more or less set in his ways."

"Always used to his cocktail before dinner, because the large rocks in his pockets for him to purchase it in many places, it is going to make him without it. It is not, hence, the enlarged pocket flask, the flask for the side pocket of the suit or for traveling bag. His wife, desirous of new ideas for birthday, Christmas or anniversary, finds a happy solution in the handsome shaker or flask."

Despite the regulation shakers and flasks there seem to have been many new designs who had nothing to do but invent little ways of hiding "this stuff" from the "inspectors" have made the flask with the hollow head, the fountain-shaped container and other novelties like the little electric light.

Gardner was stepping aboard the ferryboat Salem when the truck of Julius Greenberg, 1814 North Marshall street, jammed him against the railing. WHY PAY AS MUCH AS $400 for any Player-Piano, if you can buy a new, high-grade and guaranteed instrument for less, on easy weekly or monthly payments, with several dozen music rolls, a bench and cabinet thrown in?

A well-made Player-Piano, if carefully handled, will last from 25 to 35 years and be a constant source of pleasure and entertainment to its owners.

The Cunningham Player-Piano is manufactured with the celebrated REO-STYLE patents owned and controlled exclusively by us, in our modern, well-equipped factory. So perfect in construction is this instrument that a child can play with all the expression of the master composer himself.

Every Player-Piano we manufacture has a double valve action and metal tubing. Do not let anybody talk you into buying an instrument with a single valve action, as it has not the power or endurance—if it had, why should we spend twice as much money in developing a double valve action?

The very fact that for over a quarter of a century we have been offering $10,000.00 for a better piano than the MATCHLESS CUNNINGHAM should be sufficient proof of its quality!

All our instruments are priced from 20 to 30 per cent. lower than any dealer anywhere (whether large or small) can afford to sell. Terms arranged to suit the purchaser.
